Amitabh Bachchan is turning 70 on October 11, 2012. Also, this is his first birthday that the actor will celebrate with his granddaughter Aaradhya. And that surely calls for a big celebration. We told you how the party will be held at across three floors at the newly built Reliance Mediaworks at Film City, Goregaon on October 10 and how wife Jaya Bachchan has been looking into every single detail to make it an evening her husband and the industry would not forget too soon. We bring you the itinerary that has been meticulously chalked out by Mrs Sr B.

At 9.30 pm, Nritarutya will perform a ballet based on Harivansh Rai Bachchan's famous works recited by Big B himself

For starters, this will be a black tie affair. Men are expected to walk in wearing slick tuxedos (perhaps the ones many bought for the Karan Johar 40th birthday bash, can take those out once again). And all guests have been asked for their preference of vegetarian or non-vegetarian fare.

As for the main programme, invites have been sent out requesting guests to be on time, 8.30 pm to be precise, to respect the performers who would be a part of the show.

At 9.30 pm will be an Indian contemporary ballet presented by Bangalore-based Nritarutya dance trust. This dance will be based on some excerpts of Harivansh Rai Bachchan's famous works recited by Amitabh himself.

At 10.30 pm, the commemorative book for which several artistes have sketched or painted their impressions of the Big B, will be unveiled.

At 11 pm, dinner will be served. The dance floor will also be opened around the same time.

Interestingly, the invites that have been sent out also request all guests to leave their personal security (bouncers, bodyguards) at the main gate of the venue.
